Solar energy storage in Brazil is expected to attract BRL 45 billion ($7.8 billion) in investment by 2030, according to a study by Brazilian developer NewCharge Energy. Of that total, BRL 14 billion would be allocated to off-grid applications, BRL 16 billion to utility-scale systems, and BRL 15.

Brazilian energy suppliers raised the red flag in September 2024, signaling a rise in electricity costs as thermal power stations were fired up to cover a fall in hydroelectric output because of water shortages. With global battery prices having fallen 85% between 2010 and 2018 – and further since.

Solar energy storage in Brazil is expected to attract R$45 billion ($7.8 billion) in investments through 2030, according to a study by New Charge. Of this total, R$14 billion would go to off-grid applications, R$16 billion to utility-scale systems and R$15 billion to commercial and industrial (C&I).

Brazil is set to conduct its first auction for adding batteries and storage systems to the national power grid, as reported by Reuters. The auction, to take place in June 2025, will include 300MW energy capacity purchase that could drive an estimated $450m in investments from winning bidders.

The cost of generating electricity from solar, wind, and other renewables has declined significantly in Brazil due to economies of scale, technological improvements, and enhanced manufacturing efficiencies. This is making renewables increasingly competitive with fossil fuels. The geopolitical and.

October 18, 2024: Brazilian minister of energy and mining, Alexandre Silveira de Oliveira, has announced the country's first large-scale battery storage auction to be held in 2025. A public consultation ahead of the auction will be held in the coming days and, according to a draft of auction rules.
