Tanzania is rapidly emerging as a key player in the global lithium market, capitalizing on strategic government initiatives and a surge of interest from international mining companies. A bold 2023 ban on raw lithium exports, designed to spur local processing and value addition, is proving to be a

Additionally, in October 2024, the Geological Survey of Tanzania launched a 73-billion TZS High-Resolution Airborne Geophysical Survey to map the country's mineral resources, including lithium. With less than 20% of the country surveyed so far, the project aims to map up to 50% of Tanzania's.

Tanzania, with its rich mineral resources, has the potential to become a key supplier of low-cost lithium iron phosphate (LFP) batteries by 2030. If realized, this opportunity could generate annual revenues of US$ 10–15 billion and create approximately 22,000–25,000 jobs by 2030, rivaling global.

Market analysts project that the lithium industry could grow from $525.8 million in 2021 to nearly $1.4 billion by 2026, with battery production accounting for 95% of demand. Tanzania's rich lithium deposits position it strategically to capitalize on this market expansion. Government Support and Economic growth over the last decade has averaged 6 to 7 per cent per year and the medium-term outlook is positive, with growth projected at 6.6 per cent in 2019 and 2021. Large mining investment projects and continued foreign direct investment bode well for the future, and there is growing.

Additionally, in October 2024, the Geological Survey of Tanzania announced a 73 billion TZS High-Resolution Airborne Geophysical Survey – a nationwide initiative designed to map the country's mineral resources, including lithium. With less than 20% of the country surveyed to date, the program aims.
